Wilmington Social News

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
Wilmington, N. C., May 27.—An event of importance to Wilmington from an historic nature, and also from a social standpoint, was the unveiling of the tablet of a handsome white marble tablet, to mark the site of old Port Johnston, the first fort in the province of North Carolina. The tablet was unveiled at Southport, at the mouth of the Cape Fear River, and was a gift from the North Carolina Society of the Colonial Dames. The Dames, escorted by a large party from this city, went to the scene on a specially chartered steamer, and the band from Port Caswell, the army post nearby, was present to furnish music for the occasion. An address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Price Furless, of Southport, after which the tablet was unveiled by Mrs. Walter G. Curtis, of Southport, assisted by Miss Hannah Pattison Bolles, of this city. Miss Bolles is a leading daughter of the city. Following the unveiling an address, replete with valuable historical data was delivered by Professor J. G. de Rouilhac Hamilton, who holds the chair of history at the University of North Carolina. The tablet was then presented by Mrs. J. Sprunt, of this city, president of the
